

ANOTHER VIEW

ARTIST STATEMENT

Where the spirit does not work with the hand there is no art. Leonardo da Vinci

As a painter I find great joy and excitement in experimenting with colour and shape. This body of work marries that love of experimentation, with my travels in the Australian landscape. I have a great reverence for the natural world and feel compelled to be a voice for its defence, with a focus on shining some light on the beauty I see in landform and the plant life upon it. The rich colours, vastness and diversity in Australia is for me, deeply moving.

Another view is in part, me now taking a different view of how I approach being an artist and what I place on the canvas. It is a new adventure in my painting influenced by recent studies on how to be more relaxed, loose, and intuitive as I paint. This year I travelled solo in my van to outback Queensland from Warrnambool, speaking to many people and hearing many different views about what living on the land means to them and, seeing other artists' responses to the landscape. This trip fuelled my need for adventure and excitement and this excitement is what I seek to express on my canvas.

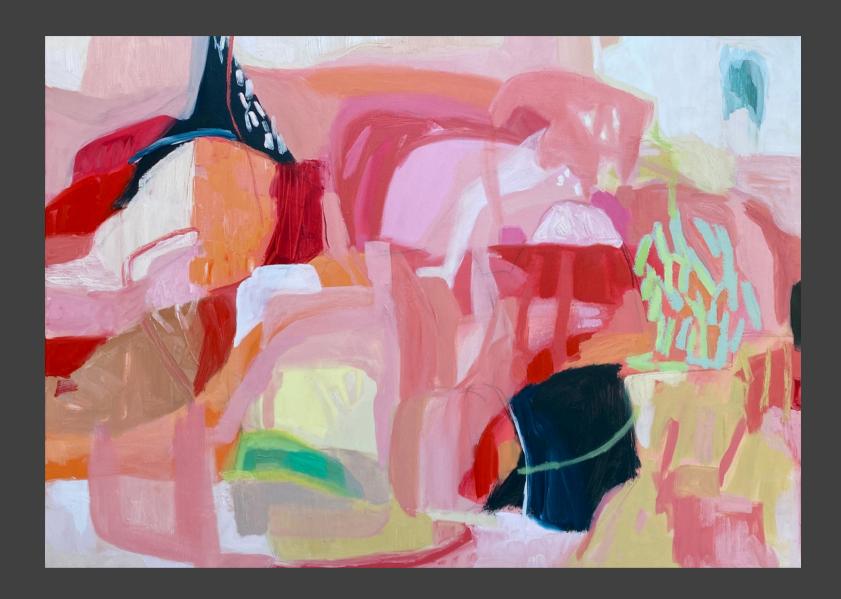

Another view also refers to many views and ways of seeing the land. My view of one place can change, and I can paint different views of the one location depending on what I focus in on. I'm fascinated and moved by the endless variations of shapes and lines that intersect and overlay in nature. When I'm deeply focused, I find landscapes and the plant life upon it an extraordinary phenomenon, almost magical.

I do not want to paint a literal interpretation of what I see - what I love to immerse myself in is interpreting it with my own play of form and colour. That is what I find truly inspiring as a painter of the natural world.

Time spent on the river is inspiring and rejuvinating. Slowing down and connecting to the natural world for me, is healing.
